Beyond chatbots: Competitive advantage with Generative AI

Two years after the introduction of ChatGPT, many companies have adopted generative AI in the form of personal chatbots. While these tools offer real value, adoption has been slow, and the results have often been underwhelming. This presentation explores how companies are leveraging generative AI to rethink their processes and services beyond personal productivity tools. Not unlike the internet, gaining a competitive edge from generative AI requires complementary innovation and broader business changes. Successful companies tend to have talented enthusiasts and cultivate a positive attitude toward AI and innovation more generally.

Is AI voice cloning making voice artists irrelevant?

Join renowned expert Reidar Wasenius as he explores the provocative question: Is AI voice cloning making artists irrelevant? In this keynote, Reidar will dive into the rise of AI-generated voices and their impact on the creative industries. He'll address the ethical and legal challenges of voice cloning, while examining what it means for artists, intellectual property rights, and the future of creativity. Discover how AI is reshaping the world of art, and whether technology is threatening the very essence of human expression or opening doors to new possibilities. Cyber Security in a Changing World

In an increasingly digital world, lawyers among cyber professionals face unique challenges in safeguarding sensitive client information against cyber threats.

This speech gives an overview of the current security situation and how we ended up here from a cyber security perspective, introduces the main threat actors and their motives, and what nations have done and should still do to address the challenges. It highlights what every lawyer must understand to protect themselves and their clients' confidentiality. By understanding the intersection of law and technology, legal professionals can become not just advisors but guardians of digital trust and security
